Students will be diverse in age, origin, background, etc. I bet on multi-talented classes, but In recent years, I have the feeling that the figure of the teacher as a guider or in a supporting role in the classroom is being lost because it's not given the value it has in my opinion, or sometimes, not always, sometimes. When teacher or the guider, this guider, this person in a supporting role in the classroom is someone who has turned his passion into his way of life. This is so important. Dedicating many more hours to their activity than what is strictly related or included in a contract. So the lack of respect contributes to the the disappointment among the teaching staff. And that's, in my opinion, very, very sad. So my ideal students in the future are diverse because diversity is very rich, providing richness, absolutely, definitely, but respectful.

It would be the best. So I am committed to a diverse and respectful generation, which is collaborative and committed students who value their training beyond the content, but also for the group of people who make it possible. Then we have a scenario to implement. With these conditions, we have a scenario to implement any methodology, any learning content, anyone. Moreover, everything will work well.
